

Miraval joins the European Public Real Estate Association (EPRA)

1 September 2022 – Miraval, the sustainable real estate developer focused on Latin America, is delighted to be appointed as an associate member of the European Public Real Estate Association (EPRA).

Miraval is a European-based, sustainable real estate developer that builds self-sufficient microcities in Latin America. Offering high-quality housing whilst operating with a focus on ESG, Miraval creates iconic projects providing an excellent balance between location, quality of designs and construction, affordability and urban planning.

EPRA promotes, develops and represents the European public real estate sector. They achieve this through providing better information to investors and stakeholders, active involvement in the public and political debate, promotion of best practices and the cohesion and strengthening of the industry.

Miraval looks forward to participating in the upcoming EPRA ReThink Conference on 6-8th of September in Paris. As an industry flagship event, which will include property tours, keynote speeches and investor networking, it will be an excellent opportunity for Miraval to be represented in this space.

Gregorio Esteban, CEO of Miraval, commented “We are proud to be part of EPRA. Membership will create ongoing and exciting opportunities for us, and is a step ahead in our plans to take the company public in the future. Raising the profile of Miraval in the European market is vital to us, as it will increase visibility to key stakeholders as well as the wider industry. Our unique, highly sustainable model continues to gain traction in Latin America, and we look forward to continued growth. The upcoming EPRA Conference will give us the opportunity to share our story and to discuss key sector and ESG themes with our peers.”

Dominique Moerenhout, CEO of EPRA commented, “We are very pleased to welcome Miraval as a new EPRA member. It will be the first European company on the market, developing and investing in sustainable and affordable residential properties in Latin America, once they are listed. I would like to wish the team good luck and a lot of success in reaching the next stage in their corporate development.”
